Mentorship programme description

During the fall of 2020 Graduate School will start a mentorship programme outside the normal programme syllabus, where a network of current and former MSc students will be created. The current MSc students have many questions about, i.e. What can I become after finishing the MSc programme?, How should I profile myself? How to start my own business? How do I prepare for the job market? And/or even more personal challenges. The programme works out in a way that every student is connected to a suitable MSc alumni who has shown interest in becoming a mentor. The mentor will then guide, support and teach the mentee during the duration of the programme.

What's in there for the Mentor?

1. obtain personal satisfaction from making a difference to the career development of another person
2. enhance skills in areas such as leadership, interpersonal skills and communication
3. increase professional networks
4. hear fresh perspectives from future members of current profession
5. increase the profile and the profile of your organisation among University students and staff

Being a mentor does not imply a heavy workload, but rather it is an informal and fun way to give something back to the MSc programme.
